Blog: Doing the right thing for Medicaid members

We've learned a lot of unexpected lessons from the COVID-19 pandemic as a country, and an industry. As we approach the unwinding of the PHE, new challenges arise — preserving coverage for millions, bridging data gaps, and advancing health equity to name a few. The resumption of Medicaid eligibility redetermination is coming in April. How is your organization preparing?

Interview: Healthcare IT Today—SameSky Health is making meaningful progress on health equity

"Health equity is achieved when everyone can attain their full potential for health and well-being." World Health Organization (WHO)

In an interview with Healthcare IT Today at HLTH 2022, Abner Mason shared insights with Colin Hung about the meaningful changes occurring with health equity. Abner points out that plans need to go beyond traditional data capture activity and build more trusted and deeper relationships with their members and communities they serve. He discusses the key reasons behind why plans have not focused on member data capture, and how he's encouraged that new regulations and ratings guidelines will help to accelerate the pace.

Save-the-Date! Webinar: Effective strategies for collecting health equity-related member data to identify and address health disparities

Healthcare stakeholders have a unique opportunity to advance health equity and help create a healthier society by leveraging relevant data to get to the root cause of disparities in health outcomes. Health plans play a critical role in driving this effort because of their end-to-end visibility into individual care needs. New requirements being mandated at the federal and state levels will also drive accountability for equitable healthcare.
